1. General Information

1.1. Programme Title

Minor Programme in Applied Psychology
应用心理学副修

1.2. Academic Unit Involved in the Delivery of the Programme

The Programme is to be offered by the Applied Psychology Programme and administrated under the Division of Science and Technology.

1.3. Programme Aims, Objectives and Intended Learning Outcomes.

With support from the Applied Psychology (APSY) Programme, the aims and objectives of the Minor Programme in Applied Psychology are:

- (1) To offer students with a quality and solid behavioural sciences foundation, so that students can understand and apply fundamental psychology knowledge as well as related skills to solve real-life problems and lead happier life;
- (2) To prepare students to work and serve within various cultural contexts. The Minor Programme in Applied Psychology at UIC will equip students with the ability to examine the practice of psychology in China through studies in cultural diversity and Chinese history. Students will be made aware that work practices, organisations, and economies do not exist in a cultural vacuum;
- (3) To enable students from other majors to solve real-life problems utilizing their knowledge derived from their major discipline and from the psychological perspectives of human affects, behaviour and cognition. This synergy of knowledge acquired from a student's major discipline and the Minor Programme in Applied Psychology will transform him/her to be an effective thinker and learner, who is open minded, socially responsible, and ethical.

Table 1 outlines the Programme Intended Learning Outcomes (PILOs) of the Minor Programme in Applied Psychology whereas Table 2 delineates the alignment of the PILOs with the Graduate Attributes (GAs) of UIC.

Table 1: Programme Intended Learning Outcomes (PILOs)

Upon successful completion of the Minor Programme in Applied Psychology, students should be able to:
PILO 1	Analyse research data and synthesise plausible solutions from a psychological perspective
PILO 2	Distinguish and relate to the complexity of intellectual and cultural diversity in China and the international context in the practice of Applied Psychology
PILO 3	Understand and develop insights pertaining to the complexities of human nature
